

Dear CU Instructors and Staff,

Thank you for your massive support and participation in the Concealed Weapons on Campus Survey. Due to some requirements of the IRB, I won't be able to post the results of the survey as soon as I had hoped. I apologize for any inconvenience.

If I cannot get permission to publish the survey's results, I will simply repeat the experiment after I get IRB approval. Make no mistake, I'll do everything I can to ensure your voices and experiences on this issue are heard.

In addition to the IRB, I have come across another setback in my research utilizing surveys. Professor Graves has informed me that while he is very supportive, he will be unable to continue as my advising professor. Therefore I am looking for another professor who would be willing to volunteer to replace him and advise me.

I intend to administer a similar survey to the CU Boulder student population. Additionally I would like to repeat this survey experiment in every school nationwide that permits legal concealed-carry on its campus.

If one of you would like to become my new advising professor and assist me with this experiment, please email me as soon as you can. If I cannot find a replacement for professor Graves, our University protocols will prevent me from finishing this experiment, let alone posting the survey results.

Many of you had constructive criticisms on the survey and some of the unclear wording of the questions. I find myself honored to have the professional and highly qualified criticisms of nearly an entire university of higher education, and I intend to accept your critiques as the gifts they are and use them to refine this survey to make it as perfect as possible.

If you have any questions, or if you would like an update on my IRB approval status, feel free to email me at ryan.knight.guncontrol@gmail.com. If you would like to see any additional research I'm doing or any papers I've written regarding the effects firearms have on society, please visit my new website at <http://knight-guncontrol.webs.com/about-us>.
